

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention relates to a piece of seating and/or reclining furniture for the outside, including at least one cover and a framework having at least two struts, between which the at least one cover extends or can extend at least in some sections, the piece of seating and/or reclining furniture or the like being designed in such a manner that the at least two struts can be moved relative to one another at least in some sections and can be fixed relative to one another at least in a tensioned position of the cover.